Only Sir George Darwin has discussed the nomical point of view. From his theory of the earth-moon system he derived an estimate of more than 56,000,000 ures. J. Joly was the first to base estimates of the age of the earth, in 1899, on the sodium contained in the dusky. ocean. Adopting the hypothesis that the sodium content of the ocean is derived at a constant rate from that of the rocks, he arrived at an age of Reid, went to Kansas City Friday 80,000,000 or 90,000,000 years, and increased this by 10,000,000 in 1900. In 1909 Mr. Sollas made a searching inquiry into this subject and placed the visiting her sister, Mrs. Lawage of the ocean at between 80,000,000 and 150,000,000 years.
